Some considerations taking particularly into account the recent bibliography) (Orig. eu)

In: Rev. int. estud. vascos. 58 , 1, 8-46

The aim of this article is, on the one hand, to do an analytic study of existing bibliography on the conquest and incorporation of Navarre, basically following the different historiographic currents that can be distinguished in the course of the last 40 years. The second part analyses the methodological premises: geopolitical situation (fundamentally Italy), the effect of the struggle between dynasties, the role of Fernando "the Catholic" and the Popes at the time and the resoluteness of the conservation of the law and institutions.

Key Words: Conquest of Navarre. Incorporation of Navarre. Navarre joined to Castile. Law and institutions of Navarre. Historiography of Navarre.

In: Rev. int. estud. vascos. 58 , 1, 48-84

Abstract: This paper will resume legal and political comparative sources and reflections on Basque Historical rights and Scottish Devolution within both "constitutional" cases, in order to establish a comparative approach. It will underline the potentials of these frameworks to develop the concept of co-sovereignty through mutual "constitutional" recognition with the UK and Spain and even towards the EU.

Key Words: Scotland. United Kingdom. European Union. Basque Country and Navarre. Constitutional Law. Historical rights. 1707 Treaty of Union.

Lower Navarra was a country of states. The seven states and valleys that made up the province had conserved the traditional Basque system, a direct family-based democracy with far-reaching administrative autonomy. In Zuberoa, the Superior Council, which included the Nobility and Clergy, replaced the assembly of family heads and Zuberoa lost its institutions in 1730. Lapurdi was the only country to conserve administrative autonomy within the kingdom of France until the Revolution
