In: Rev. int. estud. vascos. 61, 2, 246-285

Abstract: Since time immemorial, trees have taken centre stage in Basque political and legal life, providing a meeting point for the batzarre or neighbourhood assembly and a symbol for the people and the land. The material and immaterial heritage represented by those historical trees is disappearing without us really understanding their value and what they have meant for our history and landscape, our identity and culture.

In: Rev. int. estud. vascos. 61, 2, 388-420

Abstract: In times of globalizing tensions, to take education at ease, in the line of what Basil Bernstein (1975, 1987) identifies as “pedagogization of everyday life”, sounds as poor as delivering educational development distant from change. And there is no option to deep on an educational agreement without getting to consensus about the deficits in school education, which derive from how the “infrastructures of schooling” develop without an order. In this paper, we situate this educational debate in a global and glocal context.

Key words: Pedagogization of everyday life. From government to governance in education. Globalisation and mass schooling. Infrastructures of schooling. Public schooling. Consensus. Educational agreement.
