Arenas-Dolz, Francisco (Universitat de València. Departament de Filosofia. Avda. Blasco Ibáñez, 30. 46010 València): Ética, tecnología y ciudadanía. El espacio público en la era de los datos (Ethics, technology and citizenship. The public space in the data age) (Orig. es)

In: Rev. int. estud. vascos. 66, 1-2, 8-34

Abstract: The article explores how the development of artificial intelligence is a priority for cities, in the current context of increasing digitalisation. On the one hand, the conceptual framework for approaching artificial intelligence from an ethical perspective is presented. On the other hand, a model of digital cosmopolitanism is proposed, to promote a fair digital transformation in the application of artificial intelligence in cities.

Keywords: Citizenship. Democracy. Social movements. Collective intelligence. Internet. Pro-common.

Etxeberria Mauleón, Xabier (Univ. de Deusto. Centro de Ética Aplicada. Avda. de las Universidades, 24. 48007 – Bilbao): Autonomía responsable, receptividad responsiva (Responsible Autonomy, Responsive Receptivity) (Orig. es)

In: Rev. int. estud. vascos. 66, 1-2, 36-63

Abstract: Liberal enlightened modernity, with undeniable social success, placed the strict scope of ethics in the autonomy of free, independent, formally equal individuals who are responsible for their actions. Its contribution has led to important advances in the personal and political sphere but ignores basic features of the human condition, such as its constitutive dependence and lability, which advocate highlighting the primary relevance, in ethical life, of receptivity and its corresponding responsiveness. This article analyses and contrasts both approaches and concludes with a proposal of their tensional articulation.

Keywords: Independence. Autonomy. Responsibility. Lability. Receptivity. Responsiveness.

Kluger, Daniela (Romanisches Seminar der Christian-Albrechts-Universität zu Kiel. Leibnizstrasse, 10. D-24098 Kile): Baskische Mythologie und Frauendarstellung. Der Einfluss der baskischen Mythologie auf die Konstruktion des Frauenbildes in Dolores Redondo *Trilogía del Báztan (Basque mythology and the portrayal of women. The influence of basque mythology on female images in Dolores Redondo's Baztan Trilogy) (Orig. de)

In: Rev. int. estud. vascos. 66, 1-2, 64-95

Abstract: Times of crisis, like the current one, lead to a rediscovery of traditions and old beliefs which, in the Basque context, include mythology, in which a mother goddess reigns over a multitude of mythical beings. The resulting hypotheses of an ancestral Basque matriarchy inspired Dolores Redondo to write her Baztan Trilogy in 2013. This article examines the influence of Basque mythology on the image of women in the novels, both in the symbolic construction and in the social status of women.

Keywords: Image of women. Basque mythology. Feminism. Literature and women. Baztan trilogy. Dolores Redondo.

In: Rev. int. estud. vascos. 66, 1-2, 96-126

Abstract: Genomic integrity is strongly protected by cellular surveillance mechanisms, but its lack of regulation facilitates damage to the DNA molecule, genomic instability, and pathological alteration of the cells. As a consequence, diseases such as ageing and cancer develop. In this review, we will address the main findings on genomic instability, with a special focus on the causes of instability and cellular responses. We will also discuss advances based on the exploitation of this distinctive, aimed at the treatment of cancers and other diseases.

Keywords: Cancer. Old age. Mutation. Genomic instability. Cell cycle. Oncogene. Tumour suppressor.
